DALY CITY YOUTH TIRES OF CLASSES AND TAKES POISON

Suffering from nervous ailment, Carl Loven, aged 14, of 485 San Diego avenue, died in an ambulance on the way to the University of California hospital last Thursday, after taking poison.

The youth was low in his studies, and had been treated at the San Francisco hospital for nervous ailments, it was announced following the tragedy.

Young Loven told his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Loven, and his sister Sophie, a sophomore in the University of California medical school, that he had taken poison. They at first disbelived him, declaring his claim a hoax to avoid attending high school.

Later his condition became critical and an ambulance was called, but the boy had passed away before the ambulance reached the hospital.

Funeral services for the unfortunate boy were held Saturday, being conducted by Rev. Lloyd R. Carrick, Lutheran minister. Interment was in Cypress Lawn Cemetery.

UNIDENTIFIED MAN KILLED BY AUTO

Last Sunday night an unidentified man was killed by an auto at School street, near Junipero Serra boulevard. An inquest was held at Lasswell's last Tuesday and investigation made by Coroner McGovern, assisted by L. D. Pepper and Constable Silvio Landini. Findings at the inquest were that the unidentified man's death came as the result of a fractured skull and a crushed chest.

Last Wednesday Undersheriff Farrell, from Sheriff McGrath's office, took fingerprints and photos of the victim.

The following is a description of the dead man: six feet two inches tall, weight about one hundred and seventy-five pounds, chestnut brown hair and blue eyes. Was dressed in a brown suit, white broadcloth shirt, and brown tie. A grey stetson hat, size 6 7-8, and a pair of brown kid shoes completed the attire. Marks of identification: cleaners' mark in lining of the hat, F. 95; number sewed on undershirt 10801.

THREE ARE INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

The family of Charles Snaujdauf, of Miriam street, were spending the week end in Sacramento and on the return trip last Sunday night met with a painful accident. Another car hooked on to the front bumper of the Snaujdauf family car, turning it completely over, just outside of Lodi. Mrs. Snaujdauf received a broken left arm and the other hand was badly cut with flying glass, and she sustained possible internal injuries. A daughter, Martha, was badly bruised about the face and body and also received a badly sprained ankle. The father, who was driving received a badly smashed left hand, three fingers of which were cut. After receiving treatment at a local hospital Snaujdauf drove his car home with his one good arm. They were pretty badly shaken up, but were very thankful that their injuries were no worse.

GENERAL PERSHING P. T. A. HAS INTERESTING MEETING

The regular monthly meeting of the General Pershing Parent-Teacher Association was held at the school on Tuesday, October 7, with Mrs. M. Boyle presiding.

Several topics of interest were brought up, the main one being the "Maggie and Jiggs" dinner, which is to be held Saturday, October 17.

Mrs. C. Pechinino, chairlady of the study circle, called a meeting for Thursday morning at the school and requested all members to be present.

The Sunshine Box was the contributor for a gift to Baby Alexander, who has recently arrived.

At the conclusion of the meeting the members and visitors sat down to a Hallowe'en decorated table and enjoyed coffee and doughnuts, the latter the courtesy of the Peoples' Baking Company.

WELL KNOWN RESIDENT DIES

Mrs. Anne Marie Blomquist, dearly beloved wife of Gustave Blomquist, of Brunswick street, passed away last Saturday after a long illness. She leaves to mourn her passing a faithful husband and a wide circle of friends. The funeral was conducted from the parlors of Suhr & Weibolt last Monday at 2:30 P. M. Interment was at Cypress Lawn Memorial Park.

COLMA MAN DIES IN FLAMING AUTO

A. C. Wardwell, retired Southern Pacific ticket agent and a resident of Colma for a number of years, was burned to death in his car near the Skyline boulevard last Monday morning. Burned to death at his side was his shepherd dog, faithful to his master unto death.

The charred body of the unfortunate man and his faithful dog, were found near Wardwell's blazing car about 10:30 o'clock. Bernardo Canepa, a rancher, saw the burning car and rushed there to find the charred body of Mr. Wardwell.

Mr. Wardwell, out for a ride with his dog, had taken a short cut across the Canepa ranch, a mile and a half west of Colma. It is believed that the car ran out of gasoline; that Mr. Wardwell secured some gasoline and was attempting to syphon some out of the tank for the vacuum tank when the gasoline ignited and exploded as he was kneeling down behind the car.

The body of Mr. Wardwell was identified by Dr. J. C. McGovern and Constable S. A. Landini, who traced the license number of the car.

Mrs. Wardwell said she left her husband reading the newspaper account of the R-101 dirigible disaster, and when she returned he had gone for a ride.

Mr. Wardwell had been in the employ of the Southern Pacfic for almost 40 years, retiring about a year and a half ago.

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon from the W. C. Lasswell undertaking parlors, with interment at Olivet Memorial Park. The bereaved wife, Mrs. Minnie Wardwell, has the deep sympathy of her Colma and Daly City friends.

SPINSTERS ENTERTAIN AT THE M. E. CHURCH

Last Friday evening, October 3, a comedy entitled "Spinsters' Convention" was staged in the auditorium of the Daly City Methodist church, under the direction of Mrs. Fred W. Schmidt, president of the Ladies' Aid.

The cast was composed of members of the Aid, and the performance was so comical it kept the audience roaring with laughter. The characters' costumes dated back thirty or forty years.

Jane Green, the president of the "Ladies' Single Blessedness Debating Society," appeared to have just emerged from some old daguerrotype. Priscilla Abigal Hodge strutted up the aisle in her black silk dress with a trail dragging almost one yard behind. Her large flapping red hat, red shoes and red handled parasol made her an outstanding character. As secretary of the debating society her report on "Matrimonial Outlook" amused and surprised the bachelors and widowers of the town.

Jerusha Spriggins was most amusing, as she entered, carrying in one hand a bird cage, containing her kitten, Christopher Columbus Fence-rail, and in the other a large bandbox. She was the heroine of the evening, as she rushed out with her parasol and killed the mouse that had frightened the old maids, making them climb on tables and chairs.

Belinda Bluegrass, who advocated dress reform, gave a perfect exemplification of her ideas in a most clever manner.

Professor Makeover and his able French assistant, with their remodelscope, performed miracles, transforming the spinsters into old-fashioned girls, butterflies, prima donnas, and pianists, and even a man, who sang Scotch melodies.

Every character was wonderful, and the ladies deserve the highest praise.

Those who took part in the clever presentation were Mrs. F. W. Schmidt, Mrs. R. Stahl, Mrs. R. J. Orr, Mrs. S. S. King, Mrs. E. M. Haddon, Mrs. L. Nelson, Mrs. W. Owen, Mrs. M. Johnson, Mrs. F. Darragh, Mrs. G. V. McIsaac, Mrs. B. R. Cashion, Mrs. F. Worrell, Mrs. Charles Naibert, Mrs. Etta Clinton, Mrs. June Williams, Mrs. R. Tinges, Mrs. R. Smith, Mrs. H. Prziborowski, Mrs. T. L. Jorgensen, Mrs. James Bennett; Misses Alma Harper, Virginia Orr, Marie Steinbach, Betty Louise Orr, Violet Prziborowski; and Messrs. R. F. Steinbach, Louie Johns and W. M. McGregor.

This play was such a success that it will be repeated, by special request, on Friday evening, October 17, at the Methodist church on Geneva avenue and Vienna street, San Francisco.

R. N. A. WHIST

A whist party will be given next Tuesday, October 14, in the Eagles Hall, by the Royal Neigbors. All are invited. Come and enjoy an evening at cards. Mrs. D. Burdick will be hostess for the evening.

DAMON DEFEATS LOCAL GRIDDERS

Eleven Jefferson football players tried to play Damon high individually last Friday, and the result was a resounding 13 to 0 defeat. The Damon team held a 6-0 margin in the first half.

The visitors' offensive attack did not consist of a great many plays, in fact all except two were discarded when yardage was needed. A short pass in the center of Jefferson's defense was their most effective play, and wide end runs were also used to a big advantage.

Damon scored near the end of the second quarter on a one yard plunge by Sundstrom through tackle. The ball had been transported from Jefferson's 29-yard line in three plays previous to the scoring lunge. Cline, Damon fullback, crossed the goal line for the second tally late in the fourth period. An eight yard gallop around right end did the damage.

Jefferson's defense was by far the weakest it has been this season. The absence of Flannigan, left end, who received injuries in last week's game, was responsible for a number of gains around that flank. The Indians faced a much heavier and more experienced team, which held them to four first downs and a total of 51 yards gained.

This trouncing probably did the local gridders more good than harm. They will not have to worry about an uncrossed goal line when South San Francisco is played today, and a valuable lesson in team-work should have been learned. The Boilermakers' gridiron will be the scene of Jefferson's next "B" league contest.

COMPANY 4 MEMBERS ENTERTAIN LADIES

The firemen of Company No. 4 entertained the members of the Ladies' Auxiliary of Company No. 4 at a dinner-dance last Saturday night in the company fire house on Peoria street. A most delightful evening was spent in dancing.

The guests included: Mr. and Mrs. V. Fenstermacher, Mr. and Mrs. A. Chesney, Mr. and Mrs. R. Foppiano, Mr. and Mrs. E. O'Connor, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Jordan, Mr. and Mrs. A. Fonseca, Mr. and Mrs. E. Cuneo, Mr. and Mrs. A. Vireno, Mr. and Mrs. J. Viotti, Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Augustien, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hilton, John McGuinn and Henry Rolf.

PASSING OF MRS. NORTON

Mrs. Leila Norton, of Delong street, passed away last Sunday. Mrs. Norton survived her husband by only two months. Death was due to acute dilation of the heart. There being no family, all the funeral arrangements were made by her nephew, Henry Lawson, of Los Angeles. Burial services were read by the Rev. Hoffman upon the request of Mr. Lawson. The funeral was conducted from the Mortuary Chapel of Lasswell's last Monday. Mr. and Mrs. Norton were for many years residents of Delong street and were well known.

SEWING CIRCLE MEETING

The Crocker P. T. A. sewing circle met at their club rooms on Wellington avenue, Friday of last week, for an all day sewing session. At 1:30 o'clock a delicious luncheon was enjoyed. The members who were in attendance were: Mrs. L. Landini, Mrs. J. V. Jordan, Mrs. O. Pauw, Mrs. I. Yates, Mrs. M. Chesney, Mrs. W. Grantham, Mrs. Della Campbell, Mrs. A. O'Neel, Mrs. J. D. Eason and Mrs. E. Bolger.

MERCHANTS LOSE BY CLOSE SCORE

The Daly City Merchants' nine lost their initial league contest last Sunday, being defeated by the Mission Reds, 5 to 3, in a seven inning game.

This contest marked the second time that the local nine has been defeated in the last ten starts, and on both occasions the "A's" turned the trick. That fact suggests that the Reds are a better team, but a brief account of the breaks in Sunday's game should be considered before they are rated.

In the first place, none of Mission's runs were earned. Gene Keagle walked three men in the third inning after two outs, but would have been saved had not Pat Sloan dropped a throw from Strand in an attempt to trap the man off first. Later four runs crossed the plate to give the Reds a winning margin.

Keagle held the opposition to a pair of scratchy singles in five and one-third innings, issued six bases on balls and struck out two batters. Al Toole, his successor, whiffed one man and allowed one hit.

The Merchants touched Bauman, Mission pitcher, for seven hefty blows but could bunch no more than three in any inning. Fred Strand and Charley Aiello divided batting honors with two hits each.

Daly City will play the Olympic Florists next Sunday, in their second league game. Last week the Florists defeated Napa Sodas, 14 to 2. Manager Cavagnaro has not decided on his starting twirler as yet, but it is almost certain that Devencenzi, a slow ball artist, will feed the local nine some of his baffling curves.

ANNUAL HARVEST FESTIVAL TO TAKE PLACE NEXT SUNDAY

The annual harvest festival of the Schwaben Verein will be held in the California Hall, Turk and Polk streets, San Francisco, on Sunday, October 12, at 2 P. M., under the name of "The Forty-ninth Cannstatter Volkfest." During the afternoon egg and sack races will be staged, in conjunction with a peasant grand march, public wedding, rooster dance and slides of Vaterland, with a short skit on the stage. Dinner of good old-fashioned style like mother made will be served downstairs. Dancing will be conducted in two halls. The San Francisco Boys' Club will present gymnastic performances, including leaps through rings of fire.

William Haerdter, of Daly City, is president of the association, and hopes to see a large number of Daly City residents at this festival.

P. T. A. CONSIDERS PUBLICITY WORK

Publicity work for the Seventeenth District Congress of Parents and Teachers was discussed from many angles at a lunsheon held in the Benjamin Franklin hotel, San Mateo, on Thursday of last week. Forty guests and representatives of parent-teacher work were present. There were representatives from twenty-three of the thirty-five organizations in the county present. Some of the organizations were represented at the luncheon by their publicity chairmen and presidents.

Mrs. C. M. Baker, publicity chairman of the Seventeenth District, presided at the publicity conference and luncheon and introduced the honored guests and speakers. Among those at the speakers' table were Mrs. William Hayes, vice-president of the state; Mrs. Joseph Morcombe, state publicity chairman; Mrs. J. R. Spann, district president; Miss Victoria Roussel, junior past district president; Mrs. G. M. Hearst and Mrs. May H. Killiam and Beulah C. Schindler, press representatives. Greetings were extended by the honored guests and each one at the conference introduced herself and mentioned the association represented.

A general outline of parent-teacher publicity and something of the news construction of a newspaper and news values was given by Beulah Schindler, club editor of the San Mateo Daily Times, in her address to the group. Suggestions to publicity chairmen as to how they may further the interests of their association were advanced by the speaker.

Mrs. Mae Killam, newspaper woman, gave at talk on specific points of value in parent-teacher publicity and outlined methods of obtaining closer contact and co-operation with the papers. Mrs. Marcombe told something of the publicity work as advised by the state officers.

At the conclusion of the conference the entire group was taken through the plant of the San Mateo Daily Times and the mechanical construction of the paper explained.

YOUNG AVIATOR TENDERED RECEPTION BY FRIENDS

Colin Bennett, Daly City's young aviator, was given a reception last Tuesday at his home by a few of his friends, his Sunday school class boys, and the band from the Tabernacle Baptist church. They met to congratulate him on his success. They spent a very happy time together, and then they all gathered around the table to enjoy lots of good eats and ice cream. The table was beautifully decorated with a large airplane suspended from the ceiling with red ribbons attached to indvidual small red airplanes in pursuit formation.

Among those present were: John Foster, Frank Aitken, Cameron Cory, George Vogel, Joe Schilla, Billy Anderson, Willit Mills, Charles Schultze, George Mills, and the newly weds, Mr. and Mrs. Veril Newman; Miss Cockburn, Miss Georgina Bennett, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Bennett and Colin Bennett.

CONGREGATION B'NAI ISRAEL SELECTS OFFICERS FOR YEAR

The Congregation B'Nai Israel of Daly City celebrated with services at their synagogue Rosh Hoshana, beginning services Yom Kipper or day of Atonement at 8 A. M., with memorial services at 3 P. M., Cantor M. Wolf, with the assistance of S. Plansky, officiating at the service.

At the concluding services, nomination of officers for the ensuing year was taken up and the following were named for office: Presiden, S. Plansky, Vice-president, J. Brackman; Secretary, S. Rudy; Treasurer, J. Pearlman; Trustees, B. Silver, A. Levin and M. Herscovits; Shamus, M. Kanter.

LA HONDA COUPLE ARE CONVICTED OF KILLING RANCHER

Mrs. Minnie Roderick and Will C. Woodring, charged withthe murder of Frank Roderick, La Honda rancher, and hiding his body in a well, were found guilty of the "well murder" by a jury in Judge Buck's court at Redwood City last Monday.

The evidence introduced at the trial of the convicted couple indicated that Woodring shot Roderick, and that Mrs. Roderick helped Woodring transport the body from the scene of the shooting and deposit it in an abandoned well, where it was found months later.

Woodring and Mrs. Roderick will spend the remainder of their lives in prison as a result of the verdict of the jury, unless they secure a new trial and are acquitted.

Gilbert Farrell, attorney for Woodring, has indicated that his plea for a new trial for his client would be based on the contention that the testimony of one co-defendant could not be used as prima facie evidence against the other.

Woodring, on the witness stand, steadfastly denied that he had shot Roderick, branding Mrs. Roderick's statement that he had fired the shot as a lie.

The jurors who found both defendants guilty of murder in the first degree and recommended life imprisonment were out about an hour and three-quarters. It is said that the first ballot was taken immediately after the jury entered the jury room. On this ballot eleven favored conviction, while one juror held out, not because of doubt as to the guilt of either party, but because of objection to the sentence, it was reported.

Both the man and woman who now face life imprisonment for the murder of the woman's husband, Frank Roderick, on his La Honda ranch last May 15, seemed to be stunned by the verdict. Mrs. Roderick broke down and wept. Woodring's only comment was: "I told the truth when I got on the stand. I regret the jury did not believe me; however, that does not change the fact that I am innocent."

PLAYERS ENTERTAINED

HER ELEVENTH BIRTHDAY

Louise Savelly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Savelly, of Risel street, entertained a group of her playmates in honor of her eleventh birthday. The table was tastefully decorated in yellow and pink and a fancy decorated birthday cake occupied a prominent place. The little hostess received many lovely gifts. Her guests included: Alecia Fields, Dorothy Pieri, Rita Sadler, Elaine Wadaker, and Bobby Savelly.

ADVOCATES CROSS COUNTY HIGHWAY

That there is need of a cross county highway between El Camino Real and Skyline bouelevard at a central point in the lower Peninsula area, and that the county should appeal to the state for aid, was the subject of a petition of Herbert E. Law, San Francisco capitalist and San Mateo county property owner, presented to the board of supervisors last Monday.

Part of the lateral would be in this county and part in Santa Clara county. The most feasble route, he said, would be the Alpine road, connecting with roads leading to Redwood City, Menlo Park, and Palo Alto.

The supervisors decided to take Law's petition under advisement.

An actual start on the $126,000 outfall sewer project for San Bruno, Lomita Park, Capuchino and part of South San Francisco was nearer as a result of a resolution by the board ordering the work and the acquisition of rights-of-way.

The applications of William M. Conrad, South San Francisco, and Louis Varn, of Daly City, for appointment as state traffic officers, were filed.

THE STORY OF FIRE PREVENTION WEEK

President Herbert Roover's Message:

Fire losses are in effect a tax on every man, woman and child in the United States. This is one case where the taxpayers, entirely by their own efforts, can reduce the rate. I hope we shall have no slackers in this campaign.—Herbert Hoover.

Fire Prevention week is a week of education. It is the period in which the effort is made to focus the attention of every man, woman and child on the dangers to life and property which lurks in fires, and the methods by which most fires can be prevented.

But Fire Prevention week is more than just this. It is also a rallying point from which the people of America, completely aroused to fire-consciousness, should sustain their interest throughout the year in the campaign against fire.

On October 9, 1871, Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked over a lantern in a barn and thus started the great Chicago fire. The cow has become the symbol for the every-day carelessness which must be curbed if the country's disgraceful fire waste is to be restricted. The anniversary of that date is therefore set aside as Fire Prevention week. As long as we call Daly City a progressive city, let us take Fire Prevention week seriously. In the next issue of this paper I will publish, if possible, the returns of the essay contest. This contest is one of the features of Daly City's fire prevention campaign. Mail the essay to me as soon as possible. Yours for better fire prevention.—Victor Savelly, 71 Risel street, Daly City, San Mateo County Fireemen's Association, Fire Prevention Bureau.

BENEFIT SHOW AND DANCE BY COLMA BOYS' CLUB

If enthusiasm is a criterion the benefit show and dance to be given by the Colma Boys' Club, Saturday evening, October 18, at the Colombo Auditorium, will be a tremendous success. Members and friends of the Club have devoted consderable time and effort to the affair and results thus far have been gratifying.

A unique program has been arranged and will feature members of the club in comical skits and musical acts.

Several prominent radio artists and vaudeville stars have offered their services for the occasion, which promises to be an eventful one.

A motor boat containing a gold trimmed radio and upholstery of the finest quality which is expected to cost around $38,000 is being built in Mount Clemens, Mich., for the king of Siam.

The work on the federal customs house at New Orleans which was started 80 years ago has never been completed.

WHAT PRICE RELIGION?

On another page in this issue of the Record will be found one of the most startling statements concerning the churches of America that we have ever seen.

To think that the national average support to churches per capita is less than a cent a day, is astounding. And to realize that less than one in every four persons is a church member-contributor is just as astounding. And yet statistics tell us that the number of church members is increasing annually—which is a healthy sign.

But "What Price Religion" if such support is all that can be mustered? For this represents the support of the CHURCH, and the CHURCH is the fountainhead of religion. Does the worth of the modern church to us deserve no more of our support than it is receiving? Or is our Great American Family neglecting one of its greatest opportunities for self-betterment in spreading the influence of religion through increasing the resources of the churches?

And in our own particular community do we fully appreciate our opportunity in this respect? Stop and consider the influence of religion on our everyday lives. Don't confuse "church-going" with "religion," although the one usually inspires the other. Consider the influence of the cultured men in our midst who are the leaders in Daly City's religious life. Consider the influence on our community of our local laymen who are prominent in this work. Consider the influence upon your own life of the practice of humanity and fair dealing.

An then let us think over for ourselves if we personally are doing our part, are securing our share of the benefits that we can gain from participation in Daly City's church life, from the influence of others who are active in our community's church work, from the activities sponsored and brought about directly or indirectly by the churches. And then again let us stop and consider the price we put on our religion, and unquestionably we will see a widening of the influence of this greatest of influences upon our community and our people.

Fighters of recent forest fires in Maryland were handicapped by snakes and they weren't "seeing things," either. The heat drove the reptiles ont of the woods and some of them literally leaped into the faces of the firemen.

ODDS AND ENDS OF WEEK'S NEWS

Arnold Hess, Jr., wealthy Redwood City resident and owner of a ranch at Black Mountain, in Santa Clara county, was fined $500 in Justice of the Peace Chester W. Moore's court in San Jose Saturday for illegal possession of a spiked buck.

Found guilty in the Justice's court at San Carlos of reckless driving and illegal possession of liquor, Thomas Hacobo, 31, of San Francisco, is serving a twenty-five day jail term in the county jail in lieu of payment of a $50 fine.

The constitutionality of the California air navigation act of 1929 may be tested, in a case charging William Cooley, of San Mateo, with operating an unlicensed plane. Cooley was arrested on September 26 by Deputy Sheriff C. A. Callaghan at his aviation field, and charged with being without a state license.

Mrs. Maisie Herndon, of Burlingame, was rescued by firemen after she had fainted almost in the flames of a brush fire she was attempting to extinguish at her home.

Mrs. Luella Knapp, Atherton, injured in an auto crash at San Mateo on Wednesday of last week, which cost two lives, including that of her husband, George W. Knapp, 50, will be a cripple for life as the result of the accident, it having been found necessary to amputate her right leg.

Discovery of 511 gallons of alcohol in tin containers under a false bottom in an auto truck was made by federal prohibition agents at Redwood City Sunday when they halted the truck. David B. Maran, driver, was held on a charge of transportation. He was bound from San Francisco to Los Angeles, officers said.

Building operations are under way on the second unit of the million dollar building plan of the historic College of Notre Dame for Women, at Belmont. The new unit is a wing from the main structure built last year.

The 48th annual convention of the California Women's Temperance Union opened Tuesday at Santa Ana with more than 1,200 members from all parts of the state registered for the four-day conclave.

During the convention of rural school supervisors of the state, recently held at Lake Tahoe, Miss Eleanor Freeman, general rural school supervisor of San Mateo county, was elected president of the bay section rural supervisors, comprising more than fifteen counties.

An appropriation of $19,919 for improvements at Mills field has been approved by the San Francisco board of supervisors. The improvements will include an addition to hangar No. 2 and eleven street paving projects.

After 18 hours' liberty, G. W. Kidd, 24, and William C. Spivey, 24, San Quentin convicts, who escaped Monday from a road gang working a mile from the prison, were captured three miles north of Napa.

Wholesale closing of stables maintained by peninsula society members in Beresford Park loomed following a meeting of the San Mateo city council when a large delegation of residents from that section voiced a new and strong protest against what they termed "deplorable and unsanitary conditions."

Meeting a demand to "stick up" his hands by knocking the revolver out of the hands of a thug, Willard Johnson, of Hillsborough, frustrated a holdup near his residence.

San Mateo will not purchase the Clark mansion and seven acres of the estate as a site for a civic center, the council decided at Monday night's meeting.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEES' SALE.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT default having been made in the payment of the promissory note and sums secured by that certain deed of trust executed by G. W. BRAZELTON and LUCILE BRAZELTON, his wife, to GEO. M. MITCHELL and JOHN HENDERSON, as trustees, for the benefit of HOME MUTUAL DEPOSIT-LOAN COMPANY, a corporation, as beneficiary, dated January 8, 1925, and recorded January 10, 1925, in Volume 147 of Official Records, at page 378, in the office of the County Recorder of the County of San Mateo, State of California;

And notice of such default and of the election of said beneficiary to cause the property described in said deed of trust to be sold to satisfy the obligations secured by said deed of trust, having been recorded by said beneficiary, the owner and holder of the obligations and indebtedness secured thereby, on the 14th day of June, 1930, in the office of the County Recorder of the County of San Mateo, State of California, in Volume 480 of Official Records, page 290;

And said Home Mutual Deposit-Loan Company, said beneficiary, having, by resolution of its board of directors, duly certified and recorded, substituted and appointed J. DIMMER as one of the trustees in said deed of trust in the place and stead of John Henderson;

And demand having been made upon the undersigned, as trustees under said deed of trust, by said beneficiary, that said undersigned sell the premises by said deed of trust conveyed and hereinafter described as in said deed of trust provided;

Now, therefore, in accordance with the terms and conditions and under the authority of said deed of trust, and in pursuance of a resolution passed and adopted on the 10th day of June, 1930, by the board of directors of said Home Mutual Deposit-Loan Company, the owner and holder of the promissory note hereinbefore referred to, declaring that default in the payment of the principal and interest on said promissory note has been made, and requesting and directing the undersigned, as trustees, under the power and authority conferred upon said trustees by said deed of trust, and in pursuance of said resolution, to sell the said real property described in said deed of trust and hereinafter particularly described, to satisfy said indebtedness, the undersigned, Geo. M. Mitchell and J. Dimmer, hereby give notice that on MONDAY, the 20th day of October, 1930, at the hour of 11:05 o'clock a. m. of said day, at the main entrance to the San Bruno City Hall, Hensley avenue between San Bruno avenue and Kains avenue, in the City of San Bruno, County of San Mateo, State of California, they will sell, at public auction, to the highest bidder, for cash in gold coin of the United States, all that certain real property, with improvements thereon, situate, lying and being in the County of San Mateo, State of California, and described as follows, to-wit:

CHAPTER XIV

Will and Ernestine Choose

Will was nailing up a wooden box. The shelves and the table were empty. Ankle deep on the floor was a litter of papers.

"Ernestine!" He stopped, a hammer in hand, to stare at her.

"What are you doing?" she exclaimed, and then, with a little cry of horror she stooped and picked up from the rubbish on the floor, a torn picture.

"Oh, Will, how could you tear it up? It was good—it was wonderful. Why did you destroy it?" With trembling hands she tried to put the ragged pieces together on the drafting desk. He looked at her astonished, voiceless. Before her, racked against the wall, was the sketch of herself, with Elaine on her arm.

"I'm glad you didn't throw this away—oh, Will, I like it so! But what are you doing? Are you moving?"

"What do you mean, Ernestine?" he said sharply. "Did you know about this office—when have you been here?"

"Of course I knew," she said impatiently, confused to find the need for explanations now, at this vital hour. I've known you had this office, since last spring. I knew, long before that, that you were hankering for something—some new work. You remember the night you made this picture?" She picked up the sketch of herself. "You remember? Of course you do. I knew then, that you were working. Lillian had told me she saw you in this neighborhood, and I came here the next day, and looked at all your work. Oh, Will, don't look at me so! I wasn't spying on you! You were so strange, and I was very unhappy—I had to know what you were doing. But aren't you going to work here any more?"

He laughed strangely.

"Rent's due tomorrow," he said. "I decided to let it go. I'm closing this office, and I'll never open another. I suppose, since you knew I was working here, that you were worried about the cats—but you needn't have worried—I'll stay with the job. I've given up my wild ideas. We'll keep the income—that's what counts."

"Why Will," she said swiftly, "you don't think there's any conflict between your desire and mine, do you? That's what I've been saving for—all this time. I knew that you would want to quit the cats, and I've saved a great deal of money—you'll be astonished. I had to know—it was right for me to know. It's made it possible for us to build a reserve. And why should I worry about the cats? Do you think I want you to stick to the cats, if there's something bigger, something more compelling upon you? Why, Will, Will—all I want is just what you want." Suddenly she remembered her errand, with a wail. "Oh, Will, Pastano wants the money for Loring—a bribe. Loring's in terrible trouble. He'll have to go to jail, but, oh, I don't want to give them the money for him. It's your money, Will—don't give it away—don't let them take it from us."

He caught her wrist and held it hard.

"Are you out of your senses?" he asked sternly. "What do you mean—money? What money have you?"

She opened her purse and took her small savings deposit book from it. She opened the book, and put it in his hand, the total across the narrow page. His eyes were wide, incredulous. He rubbed his hand across his face.

"It's yours, Will," she said with sudden gentleness. "I have robbed you of every cent I could get from you, and I've lived as cheaply as I could, and I've banked the difference—for you."

Deep within her she heard a warning bell. She remembered that they had much to tell each other. She laid her hand upon his arm, and said in the same low tone:

"Look at me, Will."

He looked at her—his brilliant black eyes fixed on her brown eyes—he looked at her deeply, with astonishment, and suddenly Ernestine was filled with a strange power and wisdom. She passed out of self-consciousness and was controlled and guided by deep instincts and ancient mother wisdom. She moved toward Will, put her face up to his and kissed his lips.

"Will," she said, smiling up at him, her lovely face alight with feeling, her tender mouth curved in a smile of sweetness, "Will, I love you. You forget it. You ignore it—you make love a burden instead of a support. I've seen it in the deeps of your artist's mind—that love betrayed and entrapped you, instead of letting you free. Haven't you thought that?"

His arm trembled a little under her hand.

"Only once," he said, and his face flushed, "only once—the day after I had made that picture." He motioned to the picture she still held in her free hand. "The next day, I knew that I could not go on with my dreams, I knew I would have to quit it—that day, I felt so—it seemed as though—" He paused, stumbled on, with courage. "It just seemed to me—a woman is so sweet and warm in one's arms—so generous—so lovely; and then, suddenly, there are a house, and a car, and children, and nurse maids, and cooks, and doctors—a thousand things—just suddenly. I shouldn't have felt so—I fought it—but it got me. I'm telling you—you asked me."

Her eyes were full of tears.

"I knew, Will—not just that way, but I knew—that's why I've been saving and been silent—that's why I didn't ask you any questions. But, Will, I love you. It's the biggest thing in the world to me, Will. It means to me what these pictures—what this work means to you. I'm not an artist—I'm not even artistic—but I know what your work means to you, because I love you. And when you shut me out, Will, it was for me just as it was for you when you were shut off from your work. I want you to be happy." She was solemn, young, uplifted, filled with the glory of unselfishness, her face a blurred and lovely picture seen through tears.

"Dear heart, what does the money matter? Why, Will—even more than the children—yes, though I ought not say it—more than the children, than my people, than myself. You've told me how you felt, and I'll tell you, that for a little while, for one dark time, I was jealous of your work—of your love for it. But not any more, Will. I want you to have what's best for you; I want you to have your work. There isn't any conflict between your desire and mine, Will, or your future and mine, because I want what you want."

His face began to shine. He reached up, took her hand and held it.

"Ernestine," he whispered, and stopped as she leaned forward, her head against his shoulder, her face hidden so, while she went on swiftly:

"Will, I knew you were tired of the cats. Will, I spent only about a third of what you earned, last year. But you wouldn't tell me, you didn't want to talk to me, so I just went ahead, planning for the time when you would. I knew that you wouldn't want, probably wouldn't take, the money I'll have from grandmother and from papa, some day. But this is yours—it's savings from your earnings, Will. It's for your stake."

"You understood," he said hoarsely.

"Will," she said again, and now her arm was around his body, the picture up between his shoulders, "I'll tell you again—I—"

"No, no, Ernestine," he said with quick passion, "you can't let me; we can't go back. Do you know what it means? A living—I think I could make that—but it will be precarious—I've been into it all with some thought. It will be years before I can make even half what the cartoons bring me. Even if I get darned good—there's not the money to be found— I've thought it all out. I've been up and down and around this problem. I've tried to save some, too. But it won't work. It's precarious—it's too scanty. I've been through it all, and made up my mind. Don't tempt me with your savings—they wouldn't last us a year."

"If we went back to the West side, back to the old house, I could do my own work, and the children and I could live on the trust fund, until you got started. You could keep this studio, and you could go to Philadelphia and to Paris and study."

"Would you—would you do that—for me? Ernestine, my wife." He kissed her, and she shook the tears from her own lashes and drew him down and pressed her lips against his eyes.

"It wouldn't be necessary for you to do that, darling," he said to her, and he laughed a little. "It wouldn't be that bad. I could make a living—and you've your trust fund, and your grandmother has promised you the house at Langley lake. No, you won't have to go back to the West side—you can keep Molly, I believe. We can manage that much, Ernestine, with good luck and good management."

"Oh, Will," she said to him, "I almost wish it would be hard like that again. I've been so lonely—longing to help you, feeling outside. What does the car and the house and the things mean if I'm cut off from you? I know I can't help you with your painting. I know that travail is yours—that's your work—your life. It must be first with you, Will. And that's right. Gifted people can't choose. But if your work must be first, to you, you can understand what love and marriage mean to me. That's my life. And if I can feel that you can go on—because I understand—"

They were both crying, his arms were around her—tight—tight. As their tears mingled and they stood together in the long embrace, the kiss that was free from passion but frought with tenderness, the purest and holiest feeling, true married love, welled over them. It seemed to Ernestine, straining so in his arms, that for the first time she was truly wife to Will. Not only bride, bride of his body, star of his imagination, object of romantic adoration, not only the mother of his children and the keeper of his house, but wife—wife—in the deep places, the secret places of love.

"Ernestine," he whispered, after a little, and she wept afresh to hear her name so on his lips as he had whispered it when first they loved, "forgive me—that I didn't understand, that I didn't confide in you. You seemed always to have a child in your arms, a thousand needs. I felt that this other was a foe to you. I was stupid, blind. I thought you wanted the money—needed it. You were hard with me that summer before I made the cats. I didn't want to go back to that bad time again. I didn't know how wonderful you are. You're my good luck—you always were. I'll never forget it again. Oh, Ernestine, I'll do big things for you—I will."

A clock somewhere boomed two, and Ernestine started in his arms. She had remembered Loring—at last. She withdrew herself from her husband's arms and made a gesture of helplessness.

"But here's this business of Loring," she said.

"What is it about Loring?" he asked, watching her.

So with the enchantment, the throb, of love still on her, she told him about Loring—about all that Pastano had said to her that morning.

"But of course," he said at once, "you must let me take the money for you—at once. Give me the slip of paper."

She gave it to him with a reluctant sigh, and he gave a whistle as he looked at it.

"How could you have refused Pastano?" he asked. "Think what it would mean to your family—to your mother. And Lillian—with Loring dragged through the mud—"

"But Will! The money's yours—it's what we've just been talking about. It's your chance."

"I don't need twenty thousand dollars," he said quickly, and then gave a laugh of pure happiness. "Why, Ernestine," he said, "if you understand—if you know what it's all about—if you can live that economically and if you're behind me, I'll take a chance on it. Give the money for Loring—we can wangle it. After all," he added more seriously, "the understanding—the way I feel now—is worth more than the money. Let Loring have the money, we're rich. When we were young and poor we did as we liked. But after we got a little money we weren't free agents any more. The big income restricted us more than the little one. Look how Loring was bound by money! Let's let it go. After all, only beggars can choose!"

"If you'll quit the paper and go ahead with this work, if you will stick to your own dreams, I'll gamble with you," she said.

"It's done," he answered. He reached for his coat and hat, and looked at his watch at the same moment.

"We'll have to go right back to the bank. Thank God, you've got the money and don't begrudge it. Nothing can stop us, now."

And before they went out into the dark and narrow hall, they kissed again, hand in hand, simply, like children pledging a secret.

Ernestine saw Ruby Pastano near the bank entrance and, though he bowed formally and did not speak, he gave her a flashing, radiant glance, like the flash of a mirror held in the sun. She knew that he understood, from the happy countenance and from Will at her side, that they were looking after Loring.

CHAPTER XV

Some Day

But the day was not over for Ernestine. She left Will at the bank. His coat pocket was stuffed with the packet of bills the teller had given them, and her bank balance was reduced to three figures. But that didn't matter. Not a bit. She was a million times richer than she had been the day before. The bankbook figures would fatten again.

She wished she had her car, but, lacking it, she went across to Sheridan road, took a bus north, rode almost to Devon, left the bus and went to Lillian's.

Nobody answered the bell, but the door was unlocked, so Ernestine walked in. The house was silent, but she was instantly aware of the fact that some one was in it. She called, but no one answered. She went through into the kitchen. The maid's bedroom was off the kitchen and the door stood open. Ernestine went in there and saw that the room wore an unoccupied look. She opened the closet door. The hooks were empty. The maid had left, or had been dismissed.

She was still under the domination of her deep self, and, as she had been governed in Will's office an hour or so earlier by forces she did not understand, so now she went quickly up the stairs, through the silent house and into the big front bedroom where Lillian and Loring slept. The cover showed the impress of a body, the pillow had been drawn out from under the spread. She looked swiftly about and was not at all surprised to see Loring standing against the wall, behind her, one hand behind his back.

His coat collar was turned up across the back, his hair was in disorder, he was unshaved, and across one cheek was a deep imprint where his sleeve, or his pillow, had creased his flesh.

Ernestine went to him and held out her hand.

"Give it to me," she said sternly, as she might have addressed Peter.

Loring stared at her sulkily for a moment, his haggard eyes taking on a belated vitality. Then, silently, but with a shrug and a grimace, he drew from behind him a small nickel-plated revolver and put it in her hand. Ernestine crossed the room, opened the window and flung it far away into the water of the lake that breathed against the sandy beach.

"I'm a Failure," He Muttered. "A Complete Failure."

She turned back to Loring, closed the window and dusted her hands.

"That's that," she said, with a gleam in her eyes. "What did you think that was going to do for you?"

He dragged himself away from the wall and sank down into a chaise-longue. With a kind of groan Loring hid his face in his hands and sat there like a broken man.

"I didn't know till this afternoon," he said. "But the grand jury—"

"That's all right, Loring," said Ernestine. "That's fixed."

"Fixed?" he said hoarsely, and looked up at her, his expression a little wild. "You don't understand. They've got me seven ways."

"Not now," she said, thinking how strange it was that he could never know about Pastano, and about the twenty thousand dollars.

"Will fixed it," she said gently. "You know, he has friends who told him. Will fixed it for you, Loring. He could—there are men downtown who would do anything for Will. He knows the ropes."

Loring's head fell forward again.

"I'm a failure," he muttered. "A complete failure—and now Will pulls me out of the rubbish heap. I've been here in the house all afternoon, trying to screw myself up to do one decent thing—to get myself out of the way—before all this falls on the rest of you, and I couldn't even do this."

"Of course you couldn't. You're too perfectly healthy. You've been a fool perhaps—like the rest of us, but you aren't crazy, and only insane people are capable of self-destruction. Look, Loring, you can start again. Why, men sometimes have to start again when they're old. Lots of men fail once—or twice—and then succeed. You can start back and rebuild your father's old business. What if you have to let the house and the car go—it's a small price for a new start. Pastano will let you alone, as long as you stay off of his preserves. Lillian's got her money. Will and I are going to start new."

He looked up at her—eager to be comforted as a child is eager to be comforted—eager to believe her, coming back, slowly and painfully, from the dark places of fright and madness.

"But Lillian"—he said, protesting, arguing, as mortal man always argues, on the wrong side—"Lillian's going to have a baby—that was what sickened me on all that old business—I'd been sick of it, anyhow, and when I knew I might have a son—I had to get clear. I told her to go to New York, last week, but she wouldn't. She's stuck to me, Ernestine. I never believed she would. I thought she was a fair-weather wife. I've always thought it. But she's been wonderful. She let her maid go, and she's been doing her own housework. She sold her car and brought me the money. She wrote to her father to let her have her trust fund outright. Now she's going out looking for a flat. That's all right—but when I thought of prison—and Lillian's baby coming in all that trouble, it seemed that the best thing I could do would be to get out. If I were gone, she'd go home to her mother, and perhaps no one would know. I'm all caved in about Lillian, about the way she's taken it."

"Why, Loring," said Ernestine, and laughed shakily, "Lillian adores you—always did. She loves you. When you've just found out how much she cares, you contemplate leaving her. What a way to figure. If that's not like a man!"

They talked a little. Ernestine sat down on the dressing table, flung her hat upon Lillian's bed and talked to him. She told him of the new plans she and Will had made. Gradually he relaxed, came back to normal. He reached up and turned his coat collar down and put up a hand and smoothed his hair. After a little he got up and shook his big body.

"I believe I'll go and shave," he said. "I'm a fright. You won't tell Lillian or Will about this afternoon?"

"Why should I tell them? It would just scare them both. Have you had lunch?"

"No, I don't think so; no, I didn't."

"Neither did I. I'll go downstairs and fix some coffee and sandwiches while you're shaving."

From the kitchen she could hear him moving about; then she heard the front door open and the click of the latch. She went to the hall, and Lillian saw her. Lillian came back to the kitchen.

"You didn't answer the phone, so I came over—Lorrie's upstairs. He said he hadn't eaten"—she made a gesture to the preparations on the table.

Lillian nodded absently.

"Ernestine," she said softly, quickly, "I'm going to have a baby."

Ernestine kissed her. "I'm awfully glad."

"Did you know about all of Loring's trouble?"

"Will told me some—Loring's told me the rest—but the worst is over for him now."

"Poor kid," said Lillian. She leaned against the door a moment and smiled at her younger sister. It seemed to Ernestine that since she had last seen her, the hard surface had dissolved from Lillian.

"Isn't it funny? Now everything is different. I used to wonder how you could go ahead when things were so hard. But it's not so bad—in the thick of it, as it seems from the sidelines. Just to know the baby's coming makes all this mess of Loring's seem so unimportant—I don't care what arrangements we make. Oh, Ernestine, there have been times when I thought Loring loved you more than he did me, but these last few days he's been so sweet to me—so worried about me. He's humbled—it makes my heart ache. I can't tell you how I feel."

"I guess I know," Ernestine answered. "It's this business of marriage—but go on up to him, darling, and get him to eat something. All this will straighten itself out."

Lillian went up the stairs. Standing in the hall, looking after her, Ernestine realized that these sorrows were blessings—these were the things that bound a man and a woman together. This would break for ever Loring's old fixed idea about herself, and Lillian's belief that she had married for her own advantage. This would leave them close together, warm, heart to heart.

She turned the gas low under the coffee-pot, spread a napkin over the sandwiches she had fixed and slipped quietly out of the house. Perhaps Will was at home, and she would eat with him.

As she walked she began to plan all the new life. Her practical, efficient mind set itself with vigor upon the new problems. The removal to the lake—the need of a studio there for Will, the possibility of adjusting their life to changeable income. But Will was so active—he would doubtless have all the work he could do, within a year or two. Some day he would be famous, and he would find the world willing to pay for beauty as well as wit.

She walked more quickly—eager to be home, the young blood singing in her heart.

Some day—

[THE END.]

No Freedom of Worship Under Peter Stuyvesant

Early in his administration Peter Stuyvesant issued a proclamation forbidding the people to assemble for any religious service other than that of the Dutch Reformed church, which was the established church in the fort, writes P. B. Cole in the New York World, in telling "The Story of New York."

This law was vigorously enforced. Stuyvesant banished from the colony a Lutheran minister who had come from Holland to minister to the large number of Lutherans in the colony and even imprisoned Lutheran parents who failed to have their children baptized in the Dutch Reformed church.

Stuyvesant's iron hand fell heaviest, however, upon the Quakers, a large number of whom had settled on Long Island, in Hempstead. In this settlement was Robert Hodgson, who began conducting Quaker meetings among his townfolk. Stuyvesant haled him to New Amsterdam, and without allowing Hodgson to speak in his own defense, sentenced him to two years hard labor or a fine of 500 guilders.

HITCH HIKERS BANNED

After more than fourteen months of operation the Maine law against hitch hiking is declared effective and beneficial by General J. W. Hanson, chief of the state's highway police, although not a single prosecution has been necessary.

The law forbids any person on a public highway to "endeavor by words, gestures or otherwise to beg or secure transportation in any motor vehicle not engaged in carrying passengers for hire, unless said person knows the driver thereof or any passenger therein." An exception is made in case of sickness of an emergency nature. Maximum punishment for a violation of the law is $50 fine or 30 days in jail.

Hitch hikers are a nuisance to motorists, and many cases are on record in which persons soliciting a lift have robbed and even murdered those who thus befriended them. On the other hand, most kindly disposed persons would willingly give an honest pedestrian a ride if there were any way to distinguish him from the other kind.

In this matter, as in many others, a vicious minority seems to make necessary a law which imposes a hardship on those who have no wrong intentions. Law or no law, it is safer not to pick up the unknown hitch hiker.

A writer says President Hoover took office without any political training. But he'll have some when he leaves.

The eminent Mr. Al Capone may at least have the consolation that he is safer in jail than anywhere else.

THE LAST VETERAN

Never again will a veteran of the Civil war raise his voice or cast his vote in the Congress of the United States. The recent death of Congressman Charles Manly Stedman of North Carolina makes this a melancholy fact. He was the last veteran of the '60s in either branch of Congress. Senator Warren of Wyoming, the last Union soldier to serve in that body, died last year.

Major Stedman was 89 years of age at the time of his death. He did not enter Congress until he was past 70, and was finishing his tenth term, after which he had some months ago signified his intention to retire. But fate decreed that he sould die in the office he had creditably held so long.

Born on January 29, 1841, Major Stedman served as a private, lieutenant, captain and major under Lee, and was wounded three times in action. He was a lawyer by profession and had served as lieutenant-governor of North Carolina before entering Congress. On his last birthday, Congressman Daughton of that state paid a fine tribute to Major Stedman, which included these words: "He has by his great ability, courtly manners, conscientious devotion to duty, his assiduous and untiring energy, rendered a service that has commanded national recognition, approval and admiration."

STUDYING BY MAIL

More than 150,000 persons in the United States are now studying by correspondence, according to the Federal office of education, the courses covering about 200 subjects offered by 150 colleges and universities.

This method of study has some advantages even over regular class instruction, it is asserted, because the student may advance as rapidly as his time, ability and industry permit; the necessity of writing all lessons gives excellent practice in written expression; all instructions and criticisms are also written and available for future reference, besides the pupil can have free choice of subjects.

Many persons holding important executive and other positions today owe their advancement largely to the opportunities afforded by the correspondence method. Its wide extension makes it possible for anyone who is ambitious and energetic to get the practical equivalent of a college education without attending college in person.

COMMUNISTS ARE FEW

No immediate menace of communism threatens the United States, in the opinion of Congressman Fish of New York, chairman of the House committee investigating activities of communists in this country. He states, however, that it is important for the government to keep informed concerning what the Reds are doing, so as to be prepared to meet any situation which may arise.

In a recent speech Mr. Fish took occasion to pay a tribute of praise to American labor leaders and members of labor unions for their stand on communism. He said:

"The most potent force against the extension of revolutionary communism in the United States is the American Federation of Labor, which, under the intelligent, fearless and patriotic leadership of both Samuel Gompers and William Green, has stood boldly against the attempts of communists to undermine the faith of our wage-earners in our form of government and in our free institutions. The entire American people owe a debt of gratitude to the American Federation of Labor for not compromising with communism and for waging a relentless war against it wherever it shows its vicious and disloyal fang."

While communists in the United States are relatively few, they are very active, and lose no opportunity to foster class hatred, with the object of ultimately fomenting a civil war whereby they hope to destroy our form of government.

In this they will never succeed, but they can make a lot of trouble, and for that reason they should be closely watched.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

W. O. Smith, editor of the Punxsutawney, Pa., Spirit, says:

"There is one phase of advertising that is seldom thought of by the average person, and that is the philanthropic side. We all understand that advertising makes business and creates opportunities, but we seldom think of it as the most potent remedy for unemployment.

"When an article or commodity is properly advertised, a demand is created for it that requires additional employees to fill. Factories are enlarged and new indusrtial plants built to supply the trade. More hands are needed by the manufacturer. More salesmen and more clerks are required and more transportation facilities must be utilized. The consumer benefits by being introduced to a good article, the merchant benefits by increased sales, business is stimulated all along the line and there are more jobs for the unemployed.

"The advertiser may not view it in that light, but he is a public benefactor as well as a live business man."

Most campaign thunder is accompanied by very little lightning.

"In the Beginning—"

"In the beginning" . . . RELIGION was the guiding factor of every race and country. When our rugged forefathers landed at Plymouth Rock they worshiped in acknowledgment of their religion and today we keep faith with these pilgrim fathers. Today in every community are found the churches carrying on!

But that which is always with us we too often discount. It is not hard to forget that PRACTICAL RELIGION is the keynote of our community standard of living.

"For two cents" the churches in every community could be improved ONE HUNDRED PER CENT! Have you ever heard of "the religious nickel?" National standards show that the average Sunday contribution is five cents per capita—the support of the churches, based on national statistics averages about one dollar per month per member; or twenty-five cents a month per person—six cents a Sunday—LESS THAN A PENNY A DAY!

FIVE CENTS A WEEK we pay for the advantages of a religion for which our forefathers gave their lives! ONE CENT A DAY we contribute to the support of the religious ideals and principles on which our country—the leader among all nations—was established.

What percentage of the money we spend per week on an average is this "religious nickel?"

And yet THE CHURCH IS THE PRIME REQUISITE IN EVERY COMMUNITY, LARGE OR SMALL!

And "for two cents" its service, strength and lawful influence could be increased ONE HUNDRED PER CENT!

ARE WE A "RELIGIOUS NICKEL" COMMUNITY that goes to make the national standard of church support—or ARE WE A THINKING, GOD-FEARING, PROGRESSIVE COMMUNITY that "for two cents" will double the value of our churches to us?

The value of our churches cannot be over-emphasized. They are doing a wonderful work for

CALIFORNIANS TO AID IN NATIONAL SURVEY

Charles A. Adams, former Governor of California, who resides in San Francisco, and George I. Cochran, of Los Angeles, lawyer and life insurance man, have been named by Secretary Ray Lyman Wilbur as California's members of the Advisory Committee of Laymen of the National Survey of Secondary Education.

Mr. Adams and Mr. Cochran, representing California, will be two of fifty-six distinguished laymen from every state in the Union, who will supplement a group of outstanding educators in an attempt to find out where in the high school world unusual successes have been attained, and to bring those successes to the attention of other communities.

WESTERN PACIFIC GRANTED PERMIT TO ISSUE BONDS

A dispatch from Washington announces that the Western Pacific Railroad Company was authorized last Monday by the interstate commerce commission to issue $5,000,000 of first mortgage 5 per cent bonds to be sold to the highest bidder at not less that 97.5 per cent of par and accrued interest. Proceeds will be used for construction purposes.

The construction proposed is the Western Pacific's part of a line to be built in conjunction with the Great Northern from Beiber, Calif., to Klamath Falls, Ore. The Western Pacific will build from Beiber to Keddie, Calif., and the Great Northern from Keddie to Klamath Falls.

ANNUAL FIRE LOSS REACHES $500,000,000

The annual fire loss in the United States is 500,000,000, a sum which would pay the entire expenses of our Navy for four years. In addition to this property loss there is the loss of life, which totaled 10,000, not counting thousands who were injured. Of this total 31 per cent were little children under ten years of age.

Sixty per cent of all fires occur in the home. This number does not mean that the greatest property loss is from home fires, but the greatest number of alarms turned in are home fires. The average number of fire alarms in San Francisco is nineteen a day, many of them resulting in serious losses. Then aside from the property loss and loss of lives is a great economic loss which can never be estimated. When we have a fire it throws many workmen out of employment and their wages cease. If they are not receiving wages, they do not spend money and local merchants also suffer indirectly from such a loss.

And what is the cause of this great loss? Carelessness, nothing, but carelessness. If the people could only be educated to be careful instead of careless, a great deal of the suffering from fire would be eliminated.

The greatest number of fires are caused from careless smoking and matches which consumed $37,000,000 in property in the past year. Next in line is chimneys and flues. We often forget to have our chimneys cleaned out and a chimney fire results.

In one city in the United States, in twenty-seven consecutive days, nineteen babies under four years of age were burned to death by sparks from fireplaces.

Electricity is the third largest factor in fire losses. Of all fire caused by electricity 37 per cent was caused by lack of care in tthe use of the ordinary electric flat-iron.

Spontaneous combustion was another great fire cause, generally from leaving oily automobile rags or paint soaked rags lying about.

Over seven hundred women were burned to death in their homes last year while endeavoring to clean clothes with gasoline. One gallon of gasoline when properly vaporized and mixed with air has an explosive effect equal to 83 pounds of dynamite. We would not allow dynamite in our home, but still we allow women to clean clothes with gasoline, which is just as bad.

Harry L. Bowdoin, diver and inventor of Long Island, N. Y., has perfected a metal diving suit in which he descended 210 feet under water and remained there for over an hour and a half.

BOYS' HAND CAUGHT IN WELL PUMP GEAR

Snatched from death in the gears of a pump by his 12-year-old brother, Harold Silva, 8, son of a wealthy rancher near Purissima, on the coastside, is in a serious condition at the Mills Memorial hospital. The youngster is suffering from a badly mangled right arm, which may have to be amputated, and severe contusions upon his right side. Doctors said he will receover. The near-tragedy occurred in tthe pumphouse on the ranch of Manuel Silva, father of the boys.

The younger boy leaned too close to the pump belt. Instantly the lad was caught in the whirling belt and it hurled the screaming boy into the cogwheels. The elder brother sprang for the electric switch, and then snatched Harold from the wheels.

COLMA BOYS' CLUB TEAM WINS BASKETBALL GAME

The senior basketball team of the Colma Boys' Club displayed brilliant team work and clever basket tossing in their first game of the current season against the "Unknowns," following their regular Tuesday night meeting at the Colma Community Center. The boys administered a 15 to 13 defeat to the group of former high school boys.

Junior members of the organization have been holding regular practice and will soon be open to outside challenges. It is planned to enter several teams in the coming Pacific Association tournament.

ENCOURAGING SIGNS

There is one bright ray of hope that has been generally overlooked in all the pessimistic discussion of the business depression. The cost of living is now six per cent lower than it was last year at ths time and is at the lowest point since 1918. In other words, general wages could have dropped more than five per cent without affecting the buying power of the worker.

Also, it has been brought out by a number of experts that the employment trend, which was downward for close to a year, has taken an upward turn. The coming winter will very probably see industrial activity improving.

British naval experts predict that destroyers of the future will attain a speed of 60 knots an hour.

TRAIN SERVICE ACCIDENTS IN CALIFORNIA DECREASE

There were 78 less train service accidents (not including grade crossing accidents) on the steam and electric railroads operating in California during the first six months of 1930, than during the same period in 1929, according to a report filed with the Railroad Commission by Mr. H. L. Engelhardt, Safety Engineer of the Commission. There were 19 less killed, and 105 fewer injured in such accidents during 1930.

The total number of train service accidents occurring in the first half of 1930 was 551, as against 629 during the first half of 1929. The total killed in such accidents during the first six months of this year was 48, and the total injured was 362, as against 67 killed and 467 injured during the first half of 1929. The number of passengers killed in train operation accidents was but two, as against four in the first six months of 1929. Passengers injured numbered 95, as against 145 during the same period last year. The great bulk of the killed and injured were employees and trespassers.

It is now possible to extract the oil from citrus peels by a new squeezing machine, and the oil is used for flavoring soft drinks, candy, bakery products, pharmaceuticals and extracts.

MADE-TO-ORDER WEATHER

It is expected that in the near future we will be able to have "made-to-order weather" in our houses.

For several years the gas industry has been developing small units which can be installed in homes at a moderate cost to control humidity and temperature, heating in winter and cooling in summer. Already many office buildings, theatres and the like have been fitted with automatic cooling apparatus.

Experiments are now under way to combine the principles of gas heating with gas refrigeration. If successful, the weather will be of small importance to the modern home owner, who will be able to live in perfect comfort at all seasons of the year.

FIRE WASTE GROWS

The National Board of Fire Underwriters reports that the fire loss for August, 1930, was $36,043,679—$5,596,786 more than in August, 1929.

The total loss for the first eight months of this year was $313,231,190, an incerase of $20,706,009 over the total for the same period last year. At this rate, the 1930 waste will be more than $30,000,000 in excess of 1929. This loss is practically all preventable, which makes it an indictment of intelligence.

"WORLDLY WISDOM" IS PASTOR'S THEME

Grace Presbyterian church, corner of Evergreen and Hanover, will hear a sermon on Sunday night at the 7:45 service on "The Wonders of Christianity in a World of Unbelief." In spite of the great advance of the scientific world, people are still asking the same age-old questions: Is there another world? Was Christ really God? Are there miracles? Will we know our loved ones in heaven? The public is always welcome to these services, and these questions are dealt with by a pastor who is not ashamed of his faith in an old-fashioned Bible.

Bullfrog Story

A fellow on the lower Mississippi who caught bullfrogs regaled his cronies one evening by vowing that he had caught the largest bullfrog in history. It weighed, he said, 102 pounds. Skeptical, they insisted upon going and weighing it. They found that the frog weighed two pounds and that the hundred pounds was bull.

"It's raining. You'd better stay for dinner."

"Thanks, but it is not bad enough for that."

It is not a sign of weakness when you draw lavishly upon knowledge superior to your own.

Build a Home

Prices of building material are now reasonable, and a home is the best security for a loan. Thousands of people borrow money to build and pay it back in installments, like rent.

It's largely a matter of determination—of getting started. Come in and talk to us, and let us help you get started.

Particular

Salesman: "What kind of motorcar horn would you like, sir? Do you care for a good, loud blast?"

Hughty Customer: "No, I want something that just sneers."

Hundreds of thousands of people burn Coal—and will continue to burn Coal, because they know the value of radiant sustaining heat.

Carrying Out Orders

The editor wheeled his chair around and pressed a button on his desk. The office boy entered.

"Here," said the editor, "are a number of directions from outsides telling us how to run our paper. See that every one is carried out."

And the office boy, gathering them all in a large wastebasket, did so.

Medium: "I've tried all over Heaven and I can't seem to locate your wife."

Husband: "Did you look in the kitchen?"
